PREFACE.

CLASSMATES:

Another triennial year calls for another report. That which I here present is limited to the three years just elapsed, merely mentioning what occupation each one was engaged in previously to 1870, and referring for particulars to my report published in that year.

I have been unable to keep as full a record of those who did not graduate with us, as I could have wished. You will remember that all were invited to remain members of our organization, and that several signified their wish to do so. These I have taken particular pains to keep track of, and to assure that though "not recognized as sons, we claim them as brothers." Garbutt received his degree of A. B., "as of the class of 1867," in 1871.

Four of our number have died; three of them, Dinsmoor, Loud, and Sanborn, since my last report.

Marriages have been numerous, engagements are still pending, and the second generation of '67 is already numbered by the score.

My acknowledgments are due to our classmate, Lincoln, for valuable assistance, both in acting as secretary during my absence from home, and in the preparation of this report.

GEO. C. MANN,
Class Secretary.

Address: 113 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

ELIOT CHANNING CLARKE. Born 1845.

After a year's study at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he was engaged in civil engineering in the West until the spring of 1869, when he went to Phœnixville, Pa. He writes: "Since last report I have spent eight months in the iron works at Phœnixville, Pa., working as an apprentice in the foundry, blacksmith and machine shops. This was to learn something of iron and the fashioning and finishing of iron. The six months thereafter I was employed by the Hannibal Bridge Company, as assistant engineer in the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi, at Hannibal, Mo.; after the completion of that work I was employed for eighteen months upon a railroad tunnel under the Detroit River at Detroit, Mich. In March, 1873, that project was abandoned, and I entered the service of the Board of Public Works of Chicago, Ill., and am at present at work upon a new water tunnel extending under the lake."

Address: care Board of Public Works, Chicago, Ill.

JOHN HOUGHTON CLARKE. Born 1844.

"For nine months from November, 1869, I was out in Kansas, on the engineer corps of the Leavenworth, Lawrence and Galveston Railroad, where I commenced engineering as roadman, and when I came east at the end of that period, I held the position of assistant engineer, having been promoted twice. The single word, sickness, will cover the rest of the time since 1867, so far as I am concerned."

Address: Auburndale, Mass.

CLEMENT CLEVELAND. Born 1843.

Taught school in Newport, R. I., for a year after graduation. He writes: "I commenced the study of medicine in the fall of 1868, in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in New York. I was admitted to Charity Hospital, N. Y., in October, 1870; took my degree in March, 1871; finished at Charity in October, 1871, and immediately entered the Women's Hospital of the State of New York, which is under J. Marion Sims and others. Passing through the grades of Junior and Senior assistant, I became House Surgeon, October 1, 1872. April 1, 1873, I finished at the Women's Hospital, and began practice. I now assist Dr. Sims in all his operations in private practice." And in May, he writes: "I have just been appointed surgeon to the New York Post-Office."

Address: No. 60 West 38th Street, New York.

SILAS PARSONS COOK. Born 1845.

Studied for the ministry at the Princeton (N. J.) Theological Seminary. In April, 1869, he was settled in Marlborough, N. H., and in March, 1870, in Windsor, Vt., as pastor of Orthodox Congregational churches in those places. June 26, 1867, he was married to Mary Caroline Foster, of Keene, N. H.

Address: Windsor, Vt.

BENNETT FRANKLIN DAVENPORT. Born 1845.

Spent a year after graduation studying and travelling in Europe. Studied two years at the Harvard Medical School, and subsequently at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, taking his degree there in March, 1871. In the following June, passed his examination for the "M. D." of Harvard. In July, 1871, settled at 749 Tremont Street, Boston, where he has since remained. For the six months following October, 1871, was assistant in the office of Dr. H. I. Bowditch. In April, 1872, received the appointment of Visiting Physician to the South End District of the Boston Dispensary, which office he still holds. Since October, 1872, has been engaged in the public vaccination of the city of Boston, "during which time I have scratched the arms of about 4,000 persons." Is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN DAVIS. Born 1840.

Taught school for two years after graduation; attended the Andover Theological Seminary; and in November, 1872, was installed as pastor of the Free Baptist Church at Olneyville, R. I. Was married July 23, 1867, to C. E. Kelly, of Exeter, N. H.

Address: No. 288 Broadway, Providence, R. I.

NELSON LLOYD DERBY. Born 1846.

After graduation was for three years at the Lawrence Scientific School studying civil engineering, and during the second and third years was a tutor in that institution. In 1870, he went to Europe and lived successively in Paris, Berlin, and Dresden, making himself complete master of the French and German languages, at the same time contributing to the newspapers. For the last two years he has lived in Vienna, pursuing the study of architecture in connection with that of engineering. In August, 1872, he was, by invitation of the Russian government, a member of the International Statistical Congress at St. Petersburg. On recommendation of Boston architects, he was appointed by President Grant an Honorary Commissioner to the Vienna Exposition of 1873. Recently he took a trip to Italy, visiting the principal cities and objects of interest. He has been a frequent contributor to the American journals, giving much valuable information in his letters. He will probably return home at the end of the present year.

Address: care of E. H. Derby, 46 Court Street, Boston, Mass.

* FRANK FISKE DINSMOOR. Born 1845.

Engaged in business in Keene, N. H., until 1869, when he went to Chicago, and died there July 23, 1870.

At a meeting of the class held in Boston August 3, 1870, the following resolutions were adopted: —

Resolved, That by the death of our beloved classmate, Frank Fiske Dinsmoor, we lose a friend who, during his brief life, endeared himself to us all by his affectionate and manly qualities; and that we realize anew the truth that "in the midst of life we are in death."

Resolved, That we feel a sincere and deep sympathy with the family of the deceased in this their sad affliction; and

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions and a transcript of the proceedings at this meeting, be forwarded to the family of the deceased to express to them our heartfelt sympathy and sorrow.

FREDERIC DODGE. Born 1847.

Studied law; received the degree of LL. B. at the Harvard Law School, and was admitted to the bar in 1869. Since that time he has been practising his profession at 30 Court Street, Boston.

In June, 1871, he took a short trip to Europe, returning in October.

SANFORD HARRISON DUDLEY. Born 1842.

Taught school in New Bedford until 1870, when he removed to Cambridge and entered the Harvard Law School. Took the degree of LL. B. a year later, at the first examination ever required at the school. Was admitted to the bar in July, 1871, and opened offices at 20 Court Street, Boston, and in Harvard Square, Cambridge, where he is still practising his profession.

Was married April 2, 1869, to Laura Nye Howland, of Fairhaven, Mass. August 16, 1872, a daughter, Laura Howland, was born.

THOMAS SPRAGUE EDMANDS. Born 1844.

Studied law during the year 1867–8. He then became a member of the firm of Wills, Edmands & Co., East India merchants, 86 State Street, Boston. In August, 1870, he sailed for Calcutta, and since that time has been at head of the Calcutta house of his firm. The secretary is informed that he devotes much of his attention to rowing, as of old, and is the champion oarsman of the river "Hoogly," fearing no rival of whatever nationality, the admiration of all beholders. He will remain in Calcutta for two or three years longer.

THEODORE ELLIS. Born 1847.

Engaged in business in Boston after graduation; and, in 1869, accompanied his brother to California, where he went in pursuit of health and pleasure. A letter written to the secretary in 1870, says he was "ranching" at Los Angelos. A letter received in 1873, says, "Nothing new with me worth mentioning."

Address: care of Caswell, Ellis & Wright, Los Angelos, Cal.

WILLIAM ROGERS ELLIS. Born 1846.

Since graduation has been engaged in the iron business in Boston. At present he has "the sole management, control, and oversight" of the Boston Rolling Mill, owned by W. R. Ellis & Co., and situated in Cambridgeport. His Boston office is at 17 Batterymarch Street.

Was married January 10, 1870, to Helen Huntington Peirce, of Cambridge. A son, Benjamin Peirce, was born November 24, 1870; a daughter, Sarah Mills, was born August 17, 1872.

WILLIAM EDWARD ELLISON. Born 1845.

After graduation he was for a time at Chicopee, Mass., and afterwards at Northfield, Mass., engaged in instructing himself in farming. In 1870, he went to Virginia and established himself near Leesburg, in the occupation of stock-raising.

Address: Leesburg, Loudon Co., Va.

JAMES STEELE ENGLISH. Born 1844.

Studied law, and was admitted to the bar, September 10, 1870. Since that time has been engaged in the practice of his profession at 68 Cornhill, Boston.

CLEMENT KELSEY FAY. Born 1845.

Studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1869. Since that time has been engaged in the practice of his profession at 5 Tremont Street, Boston.

EDWARD WINSLOW FOX. Born 1845.

After graduation spent a year in Europe. After his return, studied law, and was admitted to the Cumberland (Maine) bar in October, 1870. Since that time has been practising law with Charles P. Mattocks, under the firm name of Mattocks & Fox, at 83 Middle Street, Portland, Maine. Was married March 27, 1871, to Anna Winslow Dana, of Portland. A daughter, Ethel Dana, was born May 29, 1872.

CHARLES SIBLEY GAGE. Born 1843.

Studied law, and in 1869 was admitted to the bar in New York. He writes, under date of New York, February 20, 1873: "I have been, since the date of your last report, and am now, practising law at 5 Beekman Street, in this city. In April, 1872, I went to Antiqua, Br. W. I., by the way of Cuba, St. Thomas, and Guadaloupe, on behalf of underwriters in this city, . . . returning in June by way of St.

Thomas, Bermudas, and Halifax. During the last half of 1872, I was employed, a portion of my time each day, upon the work of revising the American Encyclopædia, now going on. As a citizen, I have, in common with all the resident graduates of Harvard, aided as I could the movement towards municipal reform. On October 2, 1872, I was married to Lucy Clark Allen, of Cambridge, Mass."

FRANK CLARKSON GARBUTT. Born June 28, 1837.

Left college June 1, 1866, on account of ill health, and received the degree of A. B. at commencement, 1871, as a member of the class of 1867.

After leaving college he was at Whitehall and Mason City, Ill., in business and as a teacher. He writes from Denver, Colorado, under date of April 13, 1873, as follows: —

"The intention, expressed in my report for 1870, of remaining in Illinois another year and then going West, has been carried out. Early in 1871, I resigned my position at Mason City, and set out with my little family for the Rocky Mountain region of Colorado. We settled at Longmont, the recently founded town of the Chicago Colorado Colony. A stranger among strangers from various parts of the country, within three weeks of my arrival I was elected by a two-thirds majority over four other previously nominated candidates to the position of Secretary of the Colony. This office, which was by no means a sinecure, I held for six months, through the dissensions, criminations, and investigations that have been incident to all colonies of which I have any knowledge. Before being elected, I had started a furniture house, which during the term of my office I carried on through employees. In June, 1872, I sold out my business at Longmont. In August I received the appointment of principal of the public schools of East Denver. While at Longmont, I was president of the School Board, and had the satisfaction of seeing the schools surpass in system and proficiency all others in the county. . . . I expect to remain in Colorado, most likely in Denver."

May 22, 1867, he was married to M. E. Alderman, of Jacksonville, Ill., and April 5, 1868, a son, Frank Alderman, was born to him.

THOMAS HERBERT GRAY. Born 1844.

After graduating, spent two years at the Pemberton Mills, Lawrence, learning the wool business, and since 1870, of the firm of Gray, Palmer & Pendergast, wool dealers.

Address: 59 Broad Street, Boston.

SILAS WEBSTER HALE. Born 1842.

Taught school in Worcester, Mass., and Bangor, Me., and since September, 1870, has been principal of the Milford (Mass.) High School, devoting much of his time to the study of chemistry and natural history.

Address: Milford, Mass.

ALFRED HENRY HALL. Born 1845.

Taught school; spent two years in Europe as private tutor; and in the fall of 1870 entered the Andover Theological Seminary, from which he graduates this summer.

Address: Care J. M. W. Hall, Boston, Mass.

MELDON LAROY HANSCOM. Born 1843.

Was employed at the Norfolk Navy Yard for a year after graduation. In the fall of 1868, went to San Francisco, where he is now a member of the firm of Hanscom & Co., of the Ætna Iron Works.

He was married in New York, September 16, 1868, to Louisa De Forest Hyde. August 29, 1869, a son, Meldon Isaiah, was born. February 5, 1872, a son, Edmund Hyde, was born.

ISAAC TAYLOR HOAGUE. Born 1844.

Studied law, and was admitted to the bar in Boston in October, 1870. Remained one year in the office of George O. Shattuck, Esq., and then took an office at 7 Pemberton Square, where he is now engaged in the practice of his profession.

SAMUEL HOAR. Born 1845.

Studied law in Worcester, Mass., in Washington, D. C., and at the Harvard Law School. Admitted to the bar in June, 1870, and has since practised law in Suffolk and Middlesex Counties in this State, his office in Boston being at No. 5 Pemberton Square. While in Washington, he held the office of pardon clerk in the United States Attorney-General's office, under Presidents Johnson and Grant, and for two years has held the office of clerk to the District Attorney for the Suffolk District of Massachusetts. Was married October 12, 1871, to Kate Wise, of Baltimore, Md.

Address: Concord, Mass.

EDWARD JACKSON HOLMES. Born 1846.

Studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1869.

He writes, March 18, 1873: "I was secretary to Hon. Charles Sumner, and clerk of the U. S. Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, at Washington, during the sessions of Congress, between December, 1869, and March, 1871. Since my return from Washington, I have practised law in Boston (at No. 7 Pemberton Square). I was elected a member of the Common Council for Ward 6, in Boston, for the year 1872, and was re-elected for the present year. I travelled in England and on the continent last summer." Was married October 24, 1871, to Henrietta G. Wigglesworth, of Boston. A son, Edward Jackson, was born January 3, 1873.

WILLIAM HOMER. Born 1844.

Spent six months travelling in Europe, after graduation; returned home for a few months, and again went to Europe, in April, 1868. From that time until his return home, in the latter part of 1872, he was most of the time studying architecture. He is now in the office of Ware & Van Brunt, No. 2 Pemberton Square, Boston.

CHARLES LORING JACKSON. Born 1847.

Was appointed private assistant to Prof. Cooke, upon graduation; proctor, and regular assistant in chemistry, at Harvard College, in 1868; and assistant professor of chemistry, in September, 1872. Is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

JOHN COTTON JACKSON. Born 1845.

Has been connected, since graduation, with the Boston Flax Mills, at 85 Commercial Street.

October 15, 1868, was married to Louise Sewall Hubbard, of Boston. A daughter, Louise Sewall, was born July 18, 1869. A son, John Rossiter, was born January 31, 1873.

ARTHUR EARL JONES. Born 1846.

In 1867, travelled in Europe. In 1868, began the study of law, and was admitted to the bar in October, 1870. Since that time has been engaged in the practice of his profession in Boston.

* ARTHUR JONES LOUD. Born in Plymouth, Mass., February 12, 1846. Died in Boston, June 19, 1872.

After graduation he travelled in Europe, spending one term, as a student of law, at the University of Göttingen. In February, 1869, while in Paris, he lost the use of his left eye, and returned home in the following May. In September, 1869, he lost his other eye. The despondency which would naturally follow from so terrible a privation as the loss of sight, had by June, 1870, somewhat passed away; he began to take courage, and to form plans for the future. His original intention of studying law was now resumed, and he resolved to pursue his studies with the assistance of a reader. This method succeeded admirably; not only was his mind diverted, but his progress was far more rapid than could have been expected. The concentration of mind acquired by his blindness, and his ready memory, enabled him to seize and retain abstruse points of law, and when left alone, shut out from all diversions, his mind digested and arranged all he had heard. Interested and hopeful, it seemed at the time of his death as if he would really succeed in his efforts, and his admission to the bar seemed near at hand. That he should have periods of despondency is not strange, but his perseverance and courage in overcoming obstacles is certainly remarkable. His summers were passed at Plymouth, and winters in Boston at the house of his brother-in-law. At the latter place he died suddenly, on June 19, 1872. He was as well as usual in the morning, complained of no illness during the day, but was found dead upon the floor in his room in the afternoon, having died of apoplexy. He was buried in Plymouth. The hopefulness and patience with which he bore his affliction won the admiration of all who knew him, and many of the class will no doubt remember the beautiful and touching manner in which he alluded to his blindness at the last Class supper.

Notice was given of his death at the Commencement meeting in 1872, and the following resolutions were adopted: —

"Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to remove from our circle our beloved classmate, Arthur Jones Loud.

"Resolved, That we deeply mourn his loss as one who, by his fidelity to duty and exemplary character, secured our esteem and affection in college, and who has since still further won our sympathy by the patience and cheerfulness with which he endured the severe affliction which, at the beginning of a career full of promise, so sadly disappointed his bright hopes and anticipations.

"Resolved, That we tender to his family our heartfelt sympathy in this bereavement."

EDWARD JACKSON LOWELL. Born 1845.

* JOSEPH LEAVITT SANBORN. Born in Hampton Falls, N. H., October 31, 1843. Died in St. Louis, Mo., March 30, 1873.

From his life in the class-book it appears that the beginning of the instruction necessary to fit him for college depended chiefly upon his own efforts and the assistance of his brother, F. B. Sanborn, who then taught school in Concord, Mass., and by 1862, he had gone over by himself the work necessary for admission. Towards the close of that year he became a teacher in his brother's school, continuing his studies at the same time. In 1863, he was admitted to the Lawrence Scientific School; but at the beginning of the term in August, finding that a proposed new scheme of instruction there was given up, he entered the advanced class at Phillips (Exeter) Academy. In 1864, he entered unconditionally our class as a "Fresh Soph." In 1865, he was prostrated by typhoid fever, and for some time his life was despaired of. He rejoined the class after an absence of three months. He was a member of the following college societies: Institute of 1770, in which he was an editor of its journal; Harvard Natural History Society, of which he was president and recording secretary; Liberal Fraternity, of which he was president; Hasty Pudding Club, of which he was librarian; Φ. Β. Κ.; Thayer Club, of which he was president; and he was elected a member of the class committee. He was also one of the founders and editors of "The Collegian," and after its suppression, of "The Advocate."

At the first Junior exhibition, a Latin version, at the second senior exhibition, the oration on "Our Dangers from Centralization," and at Commencement, an oration on "Perversion of Moral Judgment through the Influence of Taste," were assigned to him.

For the whole course he ranked as second scholar in the class, with an average of 93 per cent, and for the Senior year led the class with an average of 96 per cent.

After graduation he was principal of the Plymouth High School for one year. From 1868–71, he taught in the school of Nath. T. Allen, at West Newton, and during the year following he was a private tutor in Cambridge. In August, 1872, he was appointed first assistant in the St. Louis High School, which position he held until his death.

He has been a contributor to the Collegian, Advocate, Boston Commonwealth, New York Nation, New York Independent, Springfield Republican, Hearth and Home, The Western, Kansas Magazine, Overland Monthly, and American Journal of Education.

July 6, 1871, he was married to Josephine C. Lakin, of Worcester, Mass., and April 5, 1872, a daughter, Josephine Leavitt, was born to him.

About two weeks before his death he was prostrated by cerebro-spinal meningitis, and died, according to the doctor's certificate, of typhoid fever. A letter from our classmate, Parker, gives interesting particulars of his sickness and death. He says: ". . . Player and I were with him the Friday and Saturday nights before his death, which occurred Sunday afternoon. The night I was with him (Friday) the poor fellow was delirious, and had been without sleep for thirty-six hours; he slept none that night, but appeared a little better in the morning. Saturday night he passed much more comfortably, sleeping about five hours, and on Sunday morning seemed so much better, that for the first time for four or five days, his friends began to have hopes of his recovery; but at noon he fell into a stupor and died soon after. . . ."

At a meeting of the class held in Boston, at the office of our classmate Ware, April 12, 1873, it was Voted, That in view of the recent sad death of our classmate, Joseph Leavitt Sanborn, whose fidelity in friendship and strength of character won to an unusual degree our affection and respect, and whose clearness of mind and honesty of purpose, whose independence of thought and modesty, marked him as an example to his fellows, we tender to his young widow our sympathies in her great bereavement, expressing to her our grief at the loss of a friend so warm and true, and of a classmate who gave promise of so brilliant a future.

CLASS FUND.

The paid-up subscriptions to the Class Fund amount to $3,056. Nearly one thousand dollars more have been subscribed and promised. Owing, however, to the fact that the class supper in 1870 was paid for from the fund, the expense has exceeded the income by $384. The remainder, $2,672, is invested in thirty-two shares of the preferred stock of the Rutland Railroad (par value $3,200), and pays an income of over eight per cent on the amount invested. Other expenses, paid out of interest received from investments, have been as follows: —

Report (in 1870)	$107 25
Commencements (five years)	177 00
Class cradle	75 00
Printing, advertising, etc.	88 97
Postage, stationery, etc.	36 63
Tax and interest	22 20
Photographs	4 80
	$511 85

This account is made up to Jan. 1, 1873. Since then several subscriptions have been paid, and more are promised at Commencement.
